A Grievous Tale of How the Institution Was Wrecked.

The story of how Johns Hopkins University came to be flat on its back, and having to pass the hat for funds is a grievous one. Toe much faith was placed in the power of one man to keep up above par the stock of a railroad in which the college was deeply in-

ISPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH. have fallen on the Johns Hopkins Univer- Clifton, and that the property is sity. The famous institution of learning, the pride of the city of the State, is in want and distress. From the proud position which a magnificent endowment, and a princely income had given it, a position which it was rapidly becoming-had really become-a university in fact as well as in name, it has fallen to a place where the salaries of its teachers must be cut, and its trustees must pass the bat and beg for money. hoping against hope that no further cuts may become necessary, hopeless of widening its usefulness over the broad fields contemplated by its founder.

ALL GONE FOR NAUGHT.

The prudence, the foresight, the economy, the energy and the munificent liberality of the kindly old Quaker who thought to benefit his kind to a remote generation, and to make the city wherein he had achieved university millions of dollars-almost four millions-and an income amounting almost to hundreds of thousands. He had earned this money honestly, and he bestowed it and a pile of depreciated paper representing

THE MUNIFICENT ENDOWMENT and the princely income have melted away. Nor is that all, for the wrecker who destroyed the hope of the founder of the institution did it deliberately, although be had obtained at the hands of this founder his power to do evil and accumulate a vast private fortune out of the wreck he created. The Johns Hopkins University was endowed with Baltimore and Ohio Railroad stock by Johns Hopkins, of Baltimore. John W. Garrett was made a trustee of the university by Johns Hopkins. In an evil day, Johns Hopkins having by his great wealth saved the Baltimore and Ohio road from bankruptcy, made John W. Garrett President of the railroad company. Thereupon John W. Garrett, who had heretofore been a partner in a grocery business that brought him a few thousand a year, became a power in railroad circles. He thought he was a great power, and so he was, in a way.

A GRIEVOUS STORY. The story of how Garrett took advantage of his power as trustees' President to use the endowment of the university for his own private gains is grievous. For ten years the school grew and flourished. New buildings were erected and a valuable addition was made to the library and apparatus. But to say that everything about the university was satisfactory to the trustees, to the faculty, or to the people of Baltimore would not be in accord with the truth. Prof. Gilman soon began to urge that the foundation of the university be placed on something more substantial than railroad stock. Of all that Board of Trustees there was one, and one only, who really objected to such a transfer of the endowment, and that was President John W. Garrett, of the Baltimore and Ohio. For personal reasons he very strenuously objected to such a transfer, and such was his influence in the board that the transfer never was made.

ONCE VERY VALUABLE

In the early days of the university it was a very profitable stock. The university held 1,500 shares of a par value of $1,500,-000, and a market value of a good deal more than $3,000,000. The annual dividend of this stock was $150,000. On the face of these facts, ordinary lolk might think that no change was necessary. But to men of sense it was a most reckless thing to thus risk the permanence of the income.

When at last the crash came and the pay ment of dividends ceased, it is said that some of the trustees shed tears over the wiping out of the funds of the university. No more sorrowful meeting of school trustees than that which followed the disaster was ever held. But it was held secretly, and the trustees will not tell what was said and done. When they are asked about it, as Mr. J. Hall Pleasants was asked about it by THE DISPATCH reporter, they all say, as he said:

MERELY A PRIVATE MATTER.

"It was a private matter. The university is not a public corporation. The people do not hold any stock in it. They have no right to know."

Whatever the legal nature of the organization, Johns Hopkins created the university not for the benefit of the gentlemen whom he named as trustees, but for the benefit of the city of Baltimore, the State of Maryland, and the whole country, for that matter. The people of Baltimore are not to be bluffed in that way. They hold the trustees morally, if not financially, responsible for their weak and reckless administration of the trust imposed upon them. The rain of the university lies on the honor of the of the condition of affairs. There was some money on hand, accumulated out of the savings of former yerrs. They had been getting $150,000 a year from the stock. The money from students had amounted to over $20,000 a year. The expenses of the University were about $130,000 a year. Some money that had been intended for new buildings could be used for current expenses.

It would not do to close the University. Would the teachers accept a reduction of salaries? They would. They will not tell how much the cut was, but it is commouly said to have been 10 per cent. Other economical measures were adopted, and all schemes for enlarging the usefulness of the University toward its intended scope were abandoned. Then the trustees passed the hat. They told their friends and the friends of the University that the institution was FLAT ON ITS BACK.

The income had failed; but they hoped that it would revive again. If $100,000 could be raised it would keep the university running during the years 1890 and 1891. By that time they would know what to expect from the Baltimore and Ohio stock. The money was pledged, and it is now ertain that the work of the faculty of philosophy will be continued during that time. The trustees get together and tell each other that, by that time, the present management of the road will be paying dividends of 3 per cent on the par value of the capital stock. They do not believe that the road will be put in the hands of a receiver. Meantime, they tell people who ask them about the institution that streets BALTIMORE, September 8.-Evil days have been laid out on the 330 acres of

> The sole and only hope of continuing the Johns Hopkins University, even in its present scope, is in the rehabilitation of the Baltimore and Ohio stock, and there are ten chances of its being wiped out to one of its being rehabilitated.

SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCE. LOUISVILLE, KY., September 8 .- A bitter rate war is on between two rival matri-monial agencies in Jeffersonville, and some slashing cuts have already been made in success famous as a seat of learning, are the line of fees. The matrimonial agent is well nigh gone for naught. He gave to this a growth belonging exclusively to Jeffersonville. His duties are to watch the ferry boats, and when he sees a couple who look like elopers in search of matrimony he introduces himself and agrees for a specified sum of money to furnish everything re-Ont of it all there can now be found a pile of school buildings, a breadth of farm land, that is worth no more than when he died, until recently the men have been good rights in the business, but it is not so now and every day marriages get cheaper.

By an especial arrangement with the magistrates the figures have been cut down from $7 50 to $3 for a complete matrimonial outfit, license, ceremony and all, including the services of a professional swearer to make oath to the lady's age. About a week ago Kratz contracted to pilot a country couple over and attend to their case for $5. On the boat Hause offered to do the job for $4, and then the row began. The rival agents cut the rate $1 at a time, until Kratz offered to do the work for nothing.

VANCEBORO, ME., September 8.—The entire State, and especially Eastern Maine, is now passing through one of the mos severe droughts known for years, and the result is that brooks have entirely dried up, while the lakes and rivers have become low and the forests and vegetation everywhere is parched and dry. As is always the case in such periods, forest fires have started in Maine and New Brunswick forests and on the St. John river.

The situation is especially serious at this time. The fires extend over several counties, and already the timber lands have been damaged to the extent of hundreds of thousands of dollars. All the people are prayfor rain, and in the burning region villages are being guarded carefully. Fredericton Junction, some miles east of here, on the New Brunswick Railway, is in a particularly critical position, and the ut-most vigilance is being exercised by its citi-zens to prevent the destruction of their property. Hundreds of young cattle run-ning in the woods have been caught and destroyed in the fires, while in a few cases farmers have been unable to save their buildings from the flames.

Deer are driven out to the settlements vildly frightened and herd with the cattle bears seek refuge in the water, where many of them have been shot already. The smoke from the fires is so dense and heavy that night navigation of the St. John been suspended for miles river has been suspended for miles, and even the regular passenger steamers from St. John to Fredericton have stopped running. Fortunately the fires near this place and on the American side have not gotten into the best timber sections as yet; but, unless rain soon comes, enormous damage will be done to the timber lands. Along the St. Croix section many miles in extent have been burned over. The fires raging between here and Fores station were caused by sparks from locomo-tives. Day and night here the sky is heavy with black clouds of smoke, and when the sun is seen through the dense mantle it is blood-red and decidedly uncanny in appear-ance. Nothing like these fires was ever known in this section, and the utmost alarm is felt concerning them.

Last night a race riot broke out in the lower and Slavacks, employed in the Tasker Iron of Poles and Slavacks into the mills, nearly two years ago.

Thirty-three of the Slavacks have been arrested and warrants will be issued for the Irish participants, who, a preliminary hear-ing before Mayor Hanson this afternoon, showed were the aggressors. The evidence thus far indicates that Jankovsky was try-load passing through Jankovsky's heart. Five Irishmen, two Hungarian men and a Hungarian woman also received wounds from gunshots and missiles in the melee.

The Accomplice of Dick Hawes to the Marder of His Wife Convictedness of the Crime.

ISPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH. The woman broke down completely when the verdict was announced and sobbed aloud. Her attorneys will move for a new trial, and if they fail to get it will appeal to the Supreme Court. The prisoner, Fanny Bryant, has made a partial confession which would have cleared her, perhaps, if she had told the story when she was on the stand at the trial of Hawes, but will do her no good now.

Dick Hawes killed his wife and one child

Dick Hawes killed his wife and one child on Saturday night, December 1, and May, the eldest child, on Monday night, December 3. The little girl, May, was left at Fanny Bryant's house from Sunday morning until Monday evening. Fanny Bryant has confessed that May told her on Sunday morning all about the killing of Mrs. Hawes and the baby the night before. Hawes began cursing his wife and she threatened to leave. She put on her clock and taking passport, and come here as Cuban citizens leave. She put on her cloak and taking Irene, her youngest child, ran out in the yard. Hawes followed her, and killed her and the child with a heavy stick. He then dragged the bodies into the house and covered them with a mattress. They lay there until Sunday night, when they were carried to a lake a few yards away, weighted with iron and then thrown in.

May, who witnessed the crime, seemed to realize that her father would kill her because the course of the course of cause she endangered his safety. This story is corroborated by the circumstantial evi-dence on which Hawes was convicted, and shows that little May was the only eye witness of the murder of her mother and sister.

The camp has assumed a more inviting appearance, the various posts have established their headquarters and hung out their flags, while before almost every tent flaps a streamer of some character. The trains to-morrow will bring many more veterans, including the Pittsburg contingent, and all indications point to this being the biggest camp in the history of the department.

During the last ten days St. Paul Twin Cities have been printing the charges of boodl eism made against Governor Merri am and Senator Washburn in the last Gubernatorial and Senatorial campaigns. The almost simultaneous publication of these charges, so far in advance of the State Convention, shows conclusively that it is part of concerted scheme, ostensibly for the sole purpose of preventing the renomination of Governor Merriam in 1899. It is well known that Merriam is ambitious to be reknown that Merriam is ambitious to be re-elected Governor next year, and in 1892 to succeed Cush K. Davis as United States Senator. With the patronage of the State at his disposal, he would enter the lists with something more substantial than the "silver-toned oratory" of Cush Davis. To an outsider the contest is likely to be between these two gentlemen. Heretofore Senator Davis has been apt to talk too freely in every campaign in which talk too freely in every campaign in which he has taken part, much to his loss; but now he cannot be caught napping, and apparently knows nothing of the combinations for or against him. He and his chieftains, however, do a powerful sight of thinking in WINDOM BEHIND IT ALL. The writer has learned from unquestionable authority that Secretary of the Treasury Windom is the man who is behind the present movement against Governor Mer-riam. From the time Windom first eathe interest of Windom for United States Senator. He first made Tim Byrnes, of Minneapolis, Appointment Clerk of the Treasury Department Clerk of the Treasury Department. Byrnes was a fledgling lawyer of medium ability and without any practice to speak of, but popular with the young Republicans, and succeeded, greatly to everybody's surprise, in being elected President of the State Republican League. He has always been an out-and-out Windom man, and is now in a position where he can do the most good for his chief, and events show that the letter has not lost his political gunning. the latter has not lost his political cunning. Secretary Windom, while not taking a very active part in the fight between Wash-burn and Sabin, managed to get in some good licks for the former. He was sly, but even then had his weather eye looking toward 1892. Washburn was backed by the money power of the twin cities, and Sabin had to go under. Windom, therefore, sees that his opponents are almost sure to be Davis and Merriam.

POPULABITY AND WEALTH The former is comparatively poor, but is the "idol of pride" of the State outside of St. Paul and Minneapolis. Merriam, on the contrary, is a millionaire, and will have the support of the wealthy corporations such as the Manitoba Railroad Company and the higgest newspapers.

and the biggest newspapers. Now, the surest way to kill off Merriam as a Senatorial candidate is to give him his quietus next year by preventing his re-nomination. While Merriam's adminisnomination. White Merriam's administration can so far show clean hands, the Governor has made many enemies by his disposition of State patronage. Ex-Governor McGill is also on the warpath. He feels that he did not get a square deal last year, being defeated for a second term, and is pining for vindication. Hon. Albert Scheffer and Lieutenant Governor Gilman will also conness Marriam. Governor Gilman will also oppose Merriam, so that Windom considers "boodle" the so that Windom considers most effective string he can pull with the farmers, and it is Windom who has thus early started the ball rolling. While devot-ing considerable attention to Merriam, Secretary Windom has not forgotten that the early bird catches the worm; hence he proceeds to make hay while the sun shines.

With Senator Washburn out of the way for six years, Mr. Windom thinks that it would be good policy to give the junior Sen-ator the lion's share of the Federal spoils in Minnesota, always, however, with an eye to Windom's interest as well. It is for this reason that Senator Davis' friends are fairly boiling over with rage. So far Davis' fol lowers have been totally ignored in the mat ter of appointments, except possibly a few village postoffices.

GRAND OLD GLADSTONE.

The English Statesman Expresses His Regard for France and America. Paris, September 8 .- Mr. Gladstone this morning attended service at the church to which the attaches of the British Embassy are accustomed to go. He said to-day to a reporter: "I have come over to Paris for a special purpose. I am too old to travel merely for the sake of the pleasure the travel affords. I have come to show good will and respect to France." In his speech at the banquet yesterday Mr. Gladstone, referring to the rapid increase of population in America, said: "I wish to recognize America's right to be considered, prospectively at least, and even now to son extent, the great organ of the powerful English tongue. I wish also to indulge in feelings of satisfaction on reflecting that no cause on earth, unless our own folly, now or hereafter, ought to divide us from one another or revive those causes of honorable r less honorable contention that have her tofore prevailed among us."

On Mr. Gladstone's invitation, Mr. Tuck, one of the American Commissioners to the Exhibition, replied in a clever speech. The French newspapers express themselves as delighted with Mr. Gladstone's speech.

LONDON, September 8-[Copyright],-John Burns' smile and wink prove to have

John Burns' smile and wink prove to have been deceptive or premature. They sent the majority of newspaper men home to bed happy that the big strike was over. That was still the impression at midnight when your correspondent cabled. A half hour later a messenger arrived at the Mansion House with a letter to the Lord Mayor, arrive that the strike committee could not saying that the strike comm secept the dock companies' terms, and about the same time copies of the new manifesto embodying the refusal reached

A FALSE MOVE.

The strike leaders have made another false move, from which they may not resover so easily as they did from the effects of the no-work manifesto. The Lord Mayor and the Bishop of London both assured your correspondent that leaders Burns and Tillett distinctly intimated their acceptance of the dock companies' offer to con-

of the dock companies' offer to concede advances in wages on and from Jamary 1. The strike leaders are equally positive that they did nothing of the kind, but their lordships' version is confirmed from an independent source, and Burns and Tillett stand convicted of what, for charity's sake, may be termed diplomacy.

No man was more astonished than the Lord Mayor when he learned that the strike committee had rejected the proposed compromise, and it is probable he will now wash his hands of the whole business. The Bishop of London and Cardinal Manning may be more patient. There is practically a consensus of opinion that the dock companies are entitled to ask for a postponement of the date upon which the increased wages shall come into force in order that they may make their tariff arrangements to meet the additional cost of labor.

named Reichert, of pleasing appearance and well-rounded form, who now charges that he has trifled with her affections.

The young lady armed herself with a cowhide on Thursday afternoon and made her way to the foundry in search of the recreant lover. Seeing her approach Plough secreted himself, and his fellow employes told the irate female, when she asked for him there, that he was not there. THE POINT AT ISSUE. The only point at issue is the duration of the probationary period, and herein, as the best hope of an early settlement, probably an offer that an increase shall date from November 1 would be accepted by both disputants, and it will probably be made. It must not be forgotten that all other demands of the strikers have been conceded in full. The settlement of disputes, especially labor disputes, is not usually arrived at by all the concessions being on one side. that he was not there. She then took her departure, but did not proceed far, remaining in hiding until the time arrived for the men to leave work, time arrived for the men to leave work, when, seeing Plough approaching, she rushed upon him and dealt him several blows over the head and shoulders. He retreated and she pursued, steadily belaboring him with the cowhide until a gleam of satisfaction lit up her countenance. The next day she appeared before a justice and swore out a warrant for his arrest.

It is undeniable that the general public are getting sick and weary of this strike business. They will probably lay upon the strike leaders the blame of its unexpected prolongation, and the effect will be seen in the diminution of subscriptious heretofore The usual demonstration was held in Hyde Park to-day. The attendance was not so great as usual, and to judge from the tone of most of the speakers, Burns included, an early compromise settlement would not be -The Thousand Island Steamboat Com-

The Lord Mayor de-murred, but promised to use his best en-deavors to persuade the dock directors to agree to the terms. Mr. Tillet explained that the compromise was rejected because it would have created difficulty with the wharfingers, who had already conceded six-
